Please provide the name and contact information for your Stanford Law School advisor:

Attach the written plan defining the educational objectives that you developed with, and that has been approved by, your advisor. That plan should:

1. include a description of your educational objectives in pursuing foreign study and indicate how your planned course of study will achieve those objectives;
2. specify the methods to be used in evaluating your attainment of those objectives;
3. indicate the specific courses you propose to take at the foreign law school;
4. explain the arrangements you have made to communicate with your faculty advisor about the course of your foreign studies.

Attach a copy of your resume.

Attach a copy of your unofficial Stanford Law School transcript.

If the law school at which you wish to study has not been approved in advance by the Foreign Law Programs Committee, please include:

- information indicating that the school meets the criteria identified in Section 3.b of the Foreign Study Guidelines;
- an explanation of your academic or professional need to study in the country or at the law school in question;
- written assurance from the foreign law school that Stanford Law School's and your proposed educational objectives can be achieved at the foreign law school;
- the course syllabi or similar descriptive course materials for your proposed course of study (so that the Committee can ensure that the program meets standards equivalent to those employed at Stanford Law School).

NOTE: To be awarded credit by Stanford Law School for your course of study at a foreign school, you must upon your return to Stanford, provide the Foreign Law Programs Committee with:

- a. a transcript or certificate documenting courses you successfully completed;
- b. copies of any written work you completed during the course of your study; and
- c. a copy of the written Final Report submitted to your faculty advisor at the conclusion of the period of foreign study.
