NAFTA CHAPTER 11 DISPUTE SETTLEMENT MECHANISM AND MEXICO: LEGITIMACY, EVALUATION AND THE CASE FOR TRANSPARENCY

A THESIS
SUBMITTED TO THE
STANFORD PROGRAM IN INTERNATIONAL LEGAL STUDIES
AT THE STANFORD LAW SCHOOL
STANFORD UNIVERSITY
IN PARTIAL FULFILLMENT OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEGREE OF
MASTER OF THE SCIENCE OF LAW

By

Sergio Puig de la Parra

May 2004

REGISTRAR'S OFFICE
MAY 03 2004
STANFORD LAW SCHOOL
ABSTRACT

NAFTA's investor-state arbitration process has generated high levels of interest among international law scholars and practitioners. Numerous analysts have informed about the clashes among political, economic and social values that the Eleven Chapter of NAFTA and its Dispute Settlement Mechanism represent. However, little analyses have been conducted under an exclusive Mexican perspective. This article evaluates the effects of NAFTA Chapter 11 Dispute Settlement Mechanism in its tenth anniversary while responding to the question whether the mechanism confers more good than harm to Mexico. Considering the political economy aspects of NAFTA, this evaluation stress the importance of a rule-oriented process to combat some aspects of internal politics and the exercise of political power, placing special interest in the information resulted from the disputes.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

ABSTRACT ........................................................................................................................ II

PREFACE ........................................................................................................................... III

FIGURES ............................................................................................................................ V

INTRODUCTION .................................................................................................................. 1

I. THE NAFTA CHAPTER 11 AND THE DISPUTE SETTLEMENT MECHANISM AT TEN ........... 11
   1) INVESTOR’S PERCEPTION OF INVESTMENT PROTECTION AND FDI INTO MEXICO AFTER NAFTA .......... 12
   2) DESCRIPTION OF CHAPTER 11 OF NAFTA .................................................................................................................. 15
      A) Section A: Substantive Provisions ........................................................................................................................... 15
      B) Section B: The Dispute Settlement Mechanism .................................................................................................... 16
   3) EMERGING PATTERNS: INVESTORS, MEASURES AND BREACHES ................................................................. 18
      A) Investors of a Party May Submit Claims to Arbitration ....................................................................................... 19
      B) Measures Adopted or Maintained by a Party .......................................................................................................... 23
      C) The Party Has Breached an Obligation .............................................................................................................. 25
   4) EVALUATION AND IMPACT: ONE ASPECT OF A TWOFOOLD REALITY .............................................. 28

II. THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF NAFTA INVESTMENT LIBERALIZATION ...................... 31
   1) THE INVESTMENT EXPORTER STATE PERSPECTIVE ......................................................................................... 31
   2) THE INVESTMENT HOST STATE PERSPECTIVE ....................................................................................................... 36

III. MONITORING STATE BEHAVIOR THROUGH INTERNATIONAL PROCEEDINGS ................. 39
   1) MARVIN ROY FELDMAN KARPA VERSUS THE GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO ..................................................... 40
      A) Marvin Roy Feldman Karpa, an Investor of the United States, Submitted a Claim to Arbitration ..................... 40
      B) Measures Adopted or Maintained by Mexico ......................................................................................................... 41
      C) Mexico Breached an Obligation ........................................................................................................................... 42
      D) The Lesson of Feldman ........................................................................................................................................... 43
   2) GAMI INVESTMENT, INC. VERSUS THE GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO ............................................................. 44
      A) GAMI Investment, Inc., an Investor of the United States, Submitted a Claim to Arbitration ..................... 44
      B) Measures Adopted or Maintained by Mexico ......................................................................................................... 45
      C) Mexico Allegedly Breached an Obligation ........................................................................................................... 46
   3) CORN PRODUCTS INTERNATIONAL, INC. VERSUS THE GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO ..................... 47
      A) Corn Products International, Inc., an Investor of the United States, Submitted a Claim to Arbitration ......... 47
      B) Measures Adopted or Maintained by Mexico ......................................................................................................... 48
      C) Mexico Allegedly Breached an Obligation ........................................................................................................... 48
      D) The Lessons of GAMI and Corn Products ........................................................................................................... 49

IV. LEGITIMACY: THE IMPORTANCE OF PROCEEDINGS AND INFORMATION ................. 52
   1) WHY DOES INFORMATION MATTER? ........................................................................................................................... 52
   2) THE DISTINCTIVENESS OF THE INFORMATION PRODUCED UNDER THE DSM ........................................... 54
   3) THE RELATION BETWEEN THE DSM PROCEEDINGS AND THE INFORMATION PRODUCED WITH THE QUALITY OF GOVERNMENT ......................................................................................... 58
   4) THE MEXICAN POSITION TOWARD TRANSPARENCY AND ACCESS TO DSM INFORMATION .......... 61
      A) Transparent Proceedings and Access to Information: The Evolution of the Debate ............................................. 61
      B) How does a Policy Privileging Information Should Look Like? ........................................................................... 65

CONCLUSIONS .................................................................................................................... 68
FIGURES

FIGURE 1: NAFTA FDI INTO MÉXICO ................................................................. 14
FIGURE 2: FLUXES OF FDI COMPARISON .................................................. 14
FIGURE 3: TOTAL NOTICES OF INTENT REPORTED .................................. 21
FIGURE 4: CASES V. MEXICO: SECTORS & INTERESTS INVOLVED ............. 22
FIGURE 5: TOTAL DISPUTES: LEVEL & BRANCH OF GOVERNMENTAL MEASURE .................................................................................................................. 24
FIGURE 6: FREQUENCY FOR SUBSTANTIVE BASES FOR NAFTA CLAIMS .......... 26